In May 1953, work was started on the construction of a large factory on the east side of Fiume at in Budapest. The area of the factory was about 150 meters square. While construction work was still going on, machinery designed for the manufacture of large-sized rubber tires for heavy trucks and aircraft arrived. The machinery was installed in June 1953 when the first story of the factory was completed. However, it proved that floors were built in a faulty manner. Girders installed broke and some of the machinery came down. Thereupon construction work was discontinued. This development made it improbable that the tire-production target as fixed for the Five-Year Plan will be attained.
